

MEMORIAL MARKER ICONS –HOBBIES and PETS

The rapid advancement of technology has touched every aspect of our personal lives. This is true in areas that we don't even think about, such as the personalization of memorial markers. Many times, death is quick, sudden, and totally unexpected leaving our loved ones with shattered lives. And although very sad, it is often comforting to visit the burial plot of a loved one and see it emblazoned with a picture of the person or with something that was a favorite hobby, sport, or pet of our loved one. While the stenciling of the mid and late 1900s paid homage to personalizing a memorial marker to something or someone our loved one liked, the stenciling technology of the 21st century used on memorial markers soothes our broken hearts with an iconic balm of remembrance, feelings, and comfort of that loved one. Shown below are a few of the personalized markers at the Charles Baber Cemetery showing the lost loved one's picture and their attachments to pets and hobbies.
